After 30 years in the police force culminating in his appointment as Communication Manager, Duncan moved to Arqiva in 1999 with specific responsibility for 3rd party Site Acquisition and Management. With an impressive list of qualifications across Contract management, Home Office Communications and NEBOSH, there was no doubting his expertise.

So when Michael Aubrey Partnership applied its telecommunication expertise to move into the field of installation site management, Duncan's experience and success in servicing site owners was too extensive to ignore.

His project management of often complex portfolios is impressive. Co-ordinating a range of clients, hundreds of locations, several Design & Build Contractors plus a welter of organisational issues and financial accounts requires phenomenal administrative skills, a sharp eye for detail and sheer doggedness.

It is perhaps not surprising then that both Duncan and his wife are Accredited Dog Breeders with the kennel club and breed pedigree gun dogs!

It is this in-depth knowledge of his subject matter that has enabled Duncan to develop pioneering solutions to taxing problems, an important dynamic in Michael Aubrey Partnership's ethos of 'Constructive thinking'. Whether allowing uninterrupted site access to site providers and users whilst maintaining high levels of security and safety, or devising bespoke databases and payment systems, or developing procedures for evaluating and improving working practices, Duncan consistently exceeds client expectations.
